(CBS4) MIAMI This Sunday, September 9th, is Grandparents Day.

With over 75 million grandparents in the United States and more than half of those being baby boomers, more individuals than ever before are celebrating that special day. But today's grandparents aren't happy to just sit home reading a book, they want to get out and see the sights. They want to pass experience, knowledge and values onto the next generation and they definitely want to spend more time with their grandkids.

One way to do that is by finding the right activities and events that grandkids and grandparents can enjoy together.

Jen Karetnick, author of "Around Miami With Kids" and regular contributor to Biscayne Times as a neighborhood columnist, was recently tapped by Grandparents.com, a new Web site designed especially for modern grandparents, to compile "101 Things to Do With Your Grandkids in Miami".

The Website, Grandparents.com (<http://grandparents.com/cgi-bin/iowa/home/index.html>) launched on September 4th.

It's described as a premier online destination for a new generation of active grandparents who want fresh ways to interact, stay connected and strengthen family bonds.

The site offers content tailored exclusively for grandparents, including kid and grandparent-friendly activities, family travel ideas, compelling lifestyle features, expert advice, product reviews for toys and technology, gift ideas for all ages and much more.
