

Grandparents.com Publishes
2007 Grandparents' Guide to the Holidays
Grandparents.com offers the Ultimate Holiday Resource –
From Seasonal Travel Tips and Gift Ideas to Recipes and Money Savers

NEW YORK, November 19, 2007 – They're here! Every grandparent knows the Holiday season means three things: gifts, guests and, sometimes, grief. Thankfully, Grandparents.com—the premier online destination for a new generation of active grandparents—has published its 2007 Guide to the Holidays to guarantee holiday happiness. A one-stop resource with all the trimmings, this seasonal companion features a variety of fun, useful tips on gift-giving, travel, entertaining, food, money savers, and more. Grandparents can now spend less time fretting and more time enjoying their grandchildren this holiday season.

Grandparents.com Guide to the Holidays features include:

- What to Buy For Your little Activist, Virtuoso, Genius...
Categorized by cost, age group and personality, this easy-to-read guide features a range of kid-tested gift suggestions for every type of grandchild, including: THE GENIUS, THE MUSIC VIRTUOSO, THE SPORTS ALL-STAR and more. In addition, a special "spoilers" section features extreme gifts that many parents would never consider buying for their kids – but that doesn't mean Grandparents can't! Anyone for Great White Shark Diving ($815/person)?!
- Holiday Activities & Events HAPPENING NOW in Your City
Over the river and through the woods...Today's Grandma (and Grandpa) want to make it worth the journey! Grandparents.com traverses the nation to bring readers local guides to the best holiday activities, festivals, events, and performances in 25 U.S. cities.
- The Perfect Christmas Dish by Molly O'Neill
Move beyond eggnog and mint jelly! Former New York Times food editor offers advice on how to put together an unforgettable family meal.
- Your Step, Half, Blended Family Field Guide
You know how it goes; someone says something and the tension begins to mount, while the rest of the family cringes. Grandparents.com helps blended families navigate these types of sticky situations and other emotional landmines around the holidays the guide features the best advice from family therapists and those blended families in the trenches.
- 5 Tips to Help You Spend Less This Holiday Season
Forget breaking the bank. 'Tis the season of giving and Grandparents.com gives up the real secrets on how to keep costs at a minimum and avoid paying retail!
- How to Give Back With Your Grandchildren
Get tips on the best community-service oriented activities for you and your grandchildren to do together. Whether you're celebrating Chanukah, Christmas, Kwanzaa, or your own version of holiday joy, Grandparents.com has solid advice on how to show charity beyond your front door.

###

About Grandparents.com

Grandparents.com is the premier online destination for a new generation of active grandparents who want fresh ways to interact, stay connected and strengthen family bonds. With an esteemed editorial staff, the site offers content tailored exclusively for grandparents, including kid and grandparent-friendly activities, family travel ideas, compelling lifestyle features, expert advice, product reviews for toys and technology, gift ideas for all ages and much more. To facilitate deeper connections among grandparents, children and their parents, members have access to a range of safe online communications tools from blogs and forums to photo and video sharing. Grandparents.com is headquartered in New York City and owned by private investment firms Laser Partners and TWS Partners.